UNIQUE PLATFORM

Line of Defence Magazine is New Zealand's only independent publication focused on the business of defence, aerospace and national security. Since its inaugural issue in April 2016, the quarterly magazine has become recognised as a world-class source of analysis for local and regional decision makers and policy makers.

Providing a uniquely New Zealand perspective on operational, strategic and acquisition developments in defence and national security,

Line of Defence features expert opinion and analysis contributed by eminent local and international academic, government and military commentators.

As New Zealand Defence progresses an acquisition program responsive to the uncertainties of climate change and intensifying geo-strategic competition in our region, Line of Defence provides expert insight and analysis for its readers – and a unique advertising platform for suppliers.

TARGETED READERSHIP

Line of Defence's targeted audience includes influencers and decision makers within the defence forces and government ministries responsible for defence, national security and resilience, foreign policy, border, aviation, maritime and cyber security, and private sector and other organisations involved in these areas – including international primes and local suppliers.

Line of Defence is published as a 48-page full-colour eMagazine viewed online or downloaded as a PDF by an international readership that numbers in the thousands. Articles from the magazine are also posted on the Defsec New Zealand website (over 50,000 page views per month) and distributed via direct email to around 1,000 subscribers.

Via regular eNewsletters and social media posts we engage with an active professional online community. Our LinkedIn connections alone total in excess of 4,000 engaged professionals – and rising.

MARKETING POWER

Line of Defence provides an integrated digital advertising solution. eMagazine advertisers receive editorial space, website banner/tile advertising, media release service, and promotion via eNewsletter, online article posts and social media posts as part of their package.

As part of Defsec New Zealand, Aotearoa's defence, security and fire protection publishing group, Line of Defence provides advertisers with an online audience spanning allied sectors. Via www.defsec.net.nz and the social media platforms our readers use, our content is always accessible, always shareable.

Via its unique integrated advertising package and allied sector reach, Line of Defence is a force multiplier for advertisers, transforming a single advertisement into a multi-platform, multi-sector marketing vehicle.

CUTTING-EDGE CONTENT

Line of Defence is published by Defsec Media Limited, New Zealand's defence, security and fire protection publishing group. Defsec also publishes New Zealand Security Magazine and FireNZ Magazine, and hosts the news portal www.defsec.net.nz, which features content from all three titles.

Line of Defence benefits from content provided by leading subject matter experts. Our contributing authors are respected practitioners, scholars and commentators of defence, strategic affairs and government procurement, eminently qualified to provide the most authoritative analysis.

Based in New Zealand, Line of Defence is uniquely able to maintain close relationships with relevant ministries and agencies and key non-government organisations, such as the New Zealand Defence Industry Association (NZDIA), think-tanks and partnering university research centres.
